Blended forms for a blended work environment

Mekos Tables by Zenith Design Studio are the physical epitome of blended working. Over recent years, the adoption of this 'blended working' method has allowed businesses to prioritise employee well-being while maintaining a central physical workspace.

With this change in attitude, so too, the physical aesthetic of the workspace has changed to meet this new work-style zeitgeist: Softer more residential profiles and 'collections' of furniture that are multi-functional yet share a common design language.

This understanding has informed the new Mekos range by Zenith Design Studio; a collection of meeting tables, team tables, standing tables, and occasional tables which all share a 'hoop' leg design language. With a range of sizes, heights, tabletops and power options, Mekos offers blended forms for a blended environment.

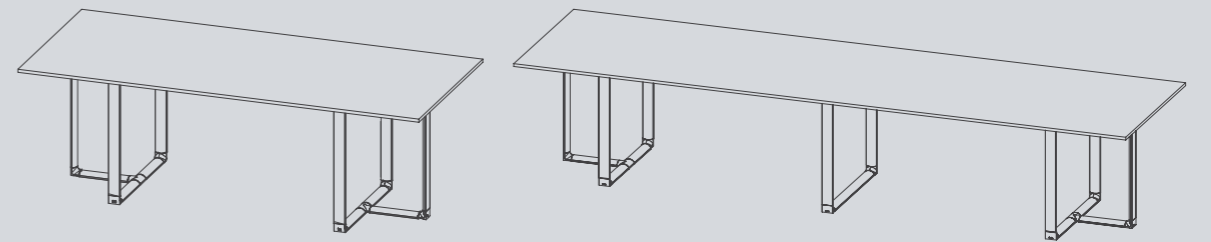

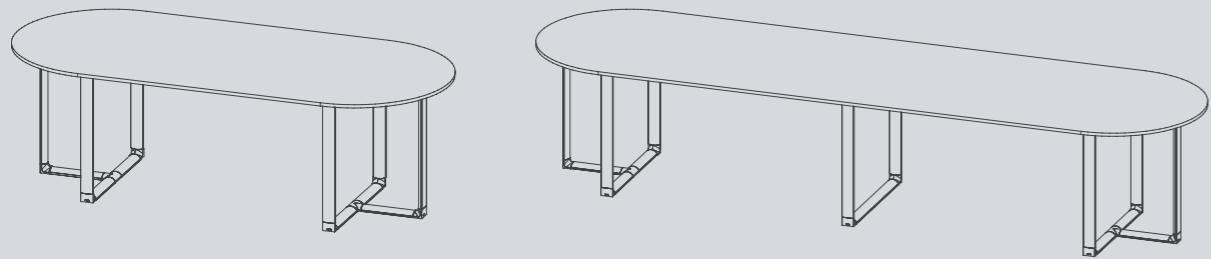

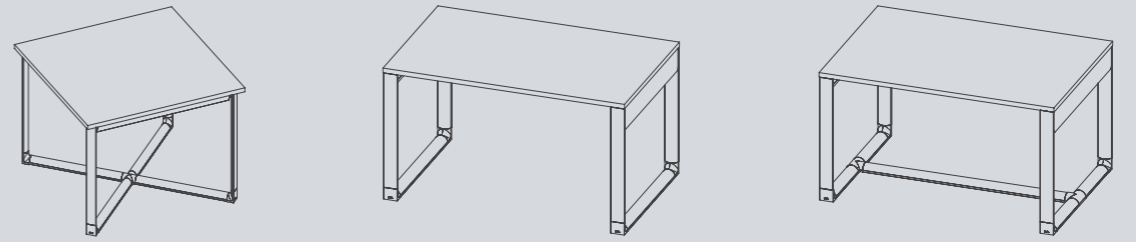

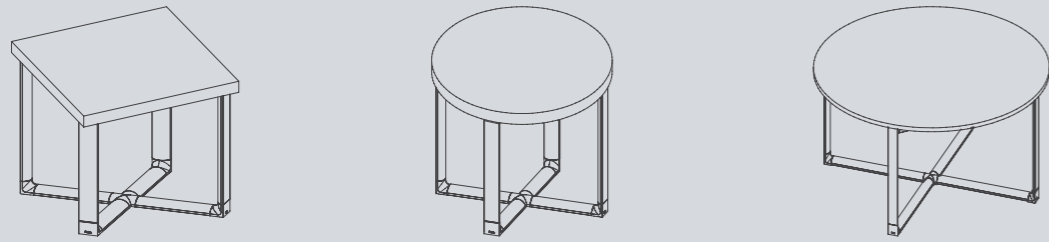

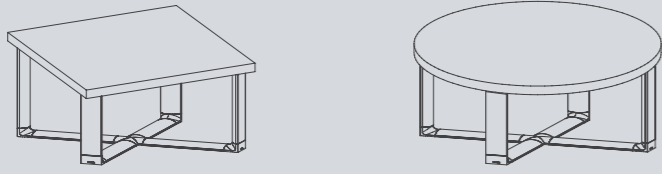

As blended work becomes commonplace and the office becomes an epicentre for collaboration and co-work, table settings that support idea exchange and participation are indispensable. Mekos selection of seated-height team and meeting tables accommodate a multitude of collaborative activities.

The unique, distinguishing feature of Mekos is the curved inner leg. Soft lines more reminiscent of residential design, are contrasted with sharp, crisp lines expressed on the outside of the leg.

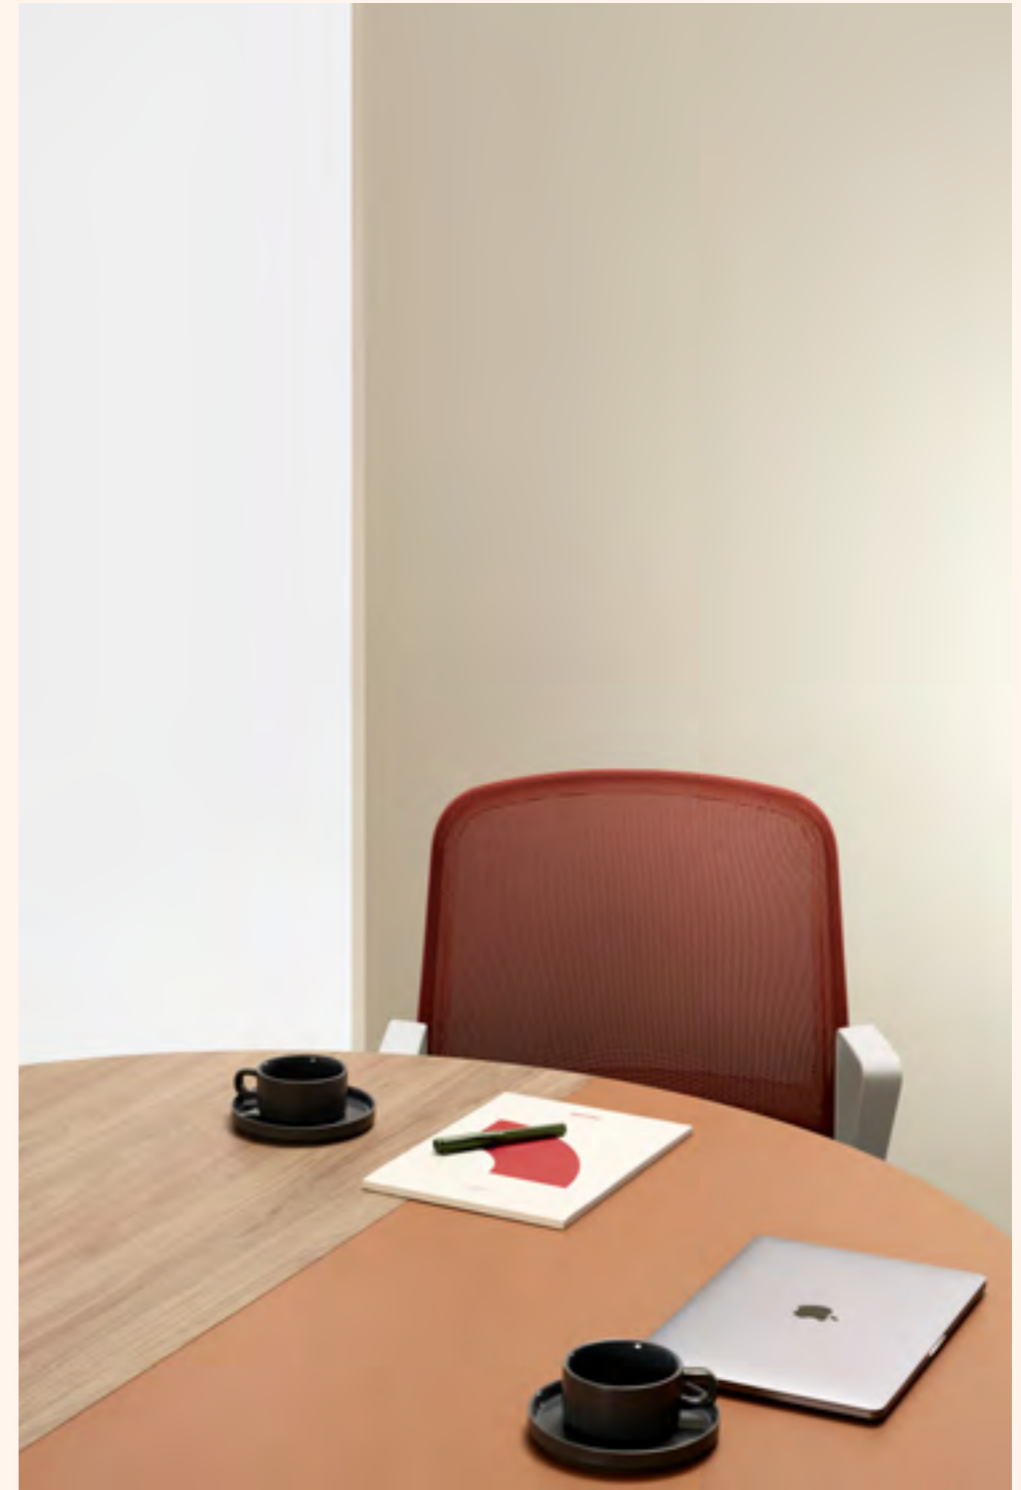

The Mekos team and meeting tables provide occupants with easy access to a range of power outlet options. Mekos Tables are compatible with several highly considered cable management and power integration options. The versatile Omni Lid provides seamless access to power outlets from above the worktop.

The Mekos standing tables continue the collection's design form, offering all the options and versatility of the seated range, but at standing height: Adding standing height options to an office space, employees are able to change their working position according to task, increase mobility, and improve their circulation. Increased standing and more movement can also lead to better interaction and engagement, creating a more dynamic and collaborative working environment.

Mekos expands your design options by offering the blending of texture and colour in your worktop option as a standard. Four-person meeting tables, seated and standing team tables, all have the option for two tone tops.

Occasional tables serve as a valuable inclusion for contemporary office spaces.

Whether you need a spot for brief discussions or seek a coffee table that complements your design aesthetic, Mekos occasional tables offer a broad palette of colour choices.

With its signature cross-hoop base, Mekos occasional tables are available in rounded or square tops, adapting seamlessly to your preferred style.
